Fathers, Sons

Feast Together

The Champion Elks proved themselves happy hosts when over 200 sat down to a splendid Father and Son banquet in the community hall on Friday night.

Toastmaster J. M. Moffatt presided, grace being said by Rev. Peter Dawson. After all appetites had been satisfied community singing was indulged in for half an hour.

J. M. Moffatt then introduced Rev. Father Cunningham, who gave an interesting talk pertaining to true relationship between Father and Son. Bobbie McCullough, representing the boys, was then called upon. He told about the pride all boys have in their dads, and their ability to do anything and everything. He then called upon all the boys to give three cheers for the Elks.

Short talks by Rev. Peter Dawson and D. H. Galbraith were well received. The special feature of the evening was then presented, namely games. These were enjoyed by father and son alike until 12 o'clock.

Worthy of mention were two cakes donated by A. Ruggles, both beautifully decorated, one with the words Father and Son. Banquet and the other with B.P.O.E. 182. The Elks were also indebted to Mr. Ruggles for the songs that he wrote for the occasion.

M. G. Clever returned this week from Los Angeles where he has spent the past two months. He made the trip to the coast city by bus and thoroughly enjoyed it, finding the bus a novel way of travelling. While in Los Angeles he made a trip on his son's, Glen Clever's, yacht, on which all passengers were former Champions. He also had the pleasure of seeing the boat on the mighty Pacific. When Mr. Clever arrived in Los Angeles his mother who is in her 84th year, was ill but at his departure she was on the road to recovery. He visited the Hoover dam on his return and found it a remarkable structure. All in all Mr. Clever said it was a delightful trip.

An Exhibition Of Childhood

London is to witness a most unique exhibition when, on April 19, will open a display of relics of "Children through the Ages", acclaimed as the most comprehensive portrayal of child life down the centuries ever presented to the public. The event deserves significance as much from its historic value of the various exhibits, as from the purpose to which the proceeds are to be devoted. The beneficiary will be one of London's most deserving charities.

The relics to be displayed link child life with the dim remote ages of the past, the oldest exhibit being a Chinese doll said to date from 600 B.C. From that far distance down the years, the varying fancies of children, the toys which brought them pleasure, the garments they wore, the furniture which decked their nurseries and playrooms, all will be traceable in the array of exhibits from the pre-Christian era down to the end of the reign of Queen Victoria.

Queen Elizabeth's christening robe, her cap and mittens, a portrait of her as a baby (by Holbein), will be on show. A shirt worn by Charles I. as a child of two, his boyhood's brocade coat, will find prominent place in the display beside Oliver Cromwell's christening robe. Here then that historic emity which ended so tragically for the monarch is made to symbolize the transitory nature of human passion and, transformed, serves the charitable purposes of to-day. Napoleon, too, will be represented, not in a manifestation of childish desire but rather in evidence of that other love which great and lowly have in common and which is, of course, as old as childhood is. The present given by the Emperor Napoleon to his infant son, the King of Rome, has been obtained as an exhibit.

Paralytically and crippled and such adjuncts of childhood that flourished in the seventeenth century, have been collected to augment the display. Children's furniture from the sixteenth to the nineteenth centuries will be shown, as well as a display of British and foreign children's clothes, hats, shoes and gloves of the same period, early games, cards and jigsaw puzzles, playbooks and jessamies. A series of rooms is being arranged to depict child scenes of bygone days with inevitable wax figures in the Madame Tussaud tradition. There will be portrayed in similar fashion a Kate Greenaway scene, a Victorian Sunday, the ancient nanny and the modern nurse.

The British royal family, as usual where charity is the object, is according wholehearted support to the exhibition. Queen Mary is contributing playthings of her own childhood, and toys which enlivened the young Prince of Wales, his brothers and sisters. A series of dolls given by Queen Victoria to the Prince of Wales also have been offered, and considerable interest will attach to an exhibit of the immature efforts of the Prince and his brother, the Duke of York, as artists. It is said these efforts are just as strenuous in result and effect as any of less exalted youth.

Perhaps one of the most interesting of the relics to be exhibited, however, has no connection whatever with the childhood of the great or the near-great. It is a perfect feeling bottle which is believed to date back to about 3750. It was discovered in possession of a farmer who was using it to feed his lambs. Probably no more fitting place could be found for this memento of a bygone period and a long-forgetting childhood than alongside the relics of royal youth and palace pageantry. It is a striking reminder of the strange democracy of the very young, that constant symbol of the "great levellers"—childhood and death—and it is to be hoped that as such, in these transitional days, it will be interpreted by those privileged to patronize the exhibition.

There is a timely moral lesson, too, in the story recently told by one of the better known financial journals. It happened that a shabbily dressed, seemingly poor, elderly woman entered the office of a large up-town bank in New York, and told the uniformed guard she desired to open an account. She was shown to the new account department where three officers of the bank were more intent upon the approaching lunch hour than upon new business, particularly business which came in such indiscreet garb. As it happened, lunch was over, and the woman was left to the manager.

After stating her mission, the old lady asked to see a statement of the bank's financial position, much to the surprise of the manager who was accustomed to having the institution's financial status taken for granted, particularly by small depositors. However, he presented the requested statement, answered courteously and intelligently intelligent and pertinent questions, which satisfied her, brought the intimation the lady wished to open an account. She gave her name and other necessary information, and casually, for he expected a small initial sum, he asked: "How much do you wish to deposit?"

"Thirty-one thousand dollars," replied the old lady, equally casually, as she proceeded to count out the money in bills of various denominations.

Harry Lauder's New Mission

Lauder Hall, Sir Harry Lauder's new mission at Strathaven, Scotland, is receiving its finishing touches, and will be ready for occupancy in a few weeks. He had given the planning his close attention, and the building contains many historic as well as unique features.

While excavating for a new building in Kustendil, Bulgaria, workmen recently found an aqueduct in which the topographic sections could be removed for cleaning.

Among men the safest auto driving ages are between 20 and 30, and among women, between 20 and 40, according to statistics recently compiled in England.

Weary Days—Sleepless Nights
Wrack the Nervous System

Men and women too late at night on sleepless beds. Their eyes do not close in the refreshing repose that comes to those whose nerves are right. They are irritable and nervous, weak and worn out, and even forgetful. Milburn's H. & N. Pills is the remedy that is required to restore them the blessing of good health. They bring back the sound refreshing sleep, clear the system, and impart that sense of buoyancy to the spirits that is the result of renewed mental and physical vigor.

Marvels of the Human Eye

By F. M. CROWE, Optometrist-Optician, Calgary

NO. 6—ASTIGMATISM

We now come to a very common defect of the eye, one little understood by the public many of whom consider it a visible inflammation condition or disease or that it is a temporary ailment, which is not so.

The simplest explanation of Astigmatism would be to describe it as an eyeball in which one or both refracting surfaces (Lens and Cornea) are not symmetrically curved. Try and visualize a perfectly round ball of glass from which you cut an alternate Cornea of the eye should be as equally curved in all meridians as that slice of glass and when it is not the condition is known as Astigmatism. It is usually congenital but may be acquired by a blow or refractive error after an illness has healed. It is also considered probable that many cases of Astigmatism have resulted from undue pressure on the eyeball in infancy by the parent wincing the child's eyes, also by the children rubbing their eyes in the horizontal direction in their "crying" years as it is usually in this horizontal direction that Astigmatism exists. An unsymmetrical (not uniformly curved) Lens is usually the cause which will, as we saw previously, either offset or neutralize the formed Cornea, in the interests of good vision.

We have seen that rays of light from any object, to be seen clearly and comfortably, must focus on the retina and do so must pass through a symmetrical curved surface which you see is impossible where Astigmatism exists because the focus is a blurred line instead of a sharp point. The poor vision which would result from a lens of moderate amount is often overcome by the above action of the Lens. The sharp minor nerve sends power to the Cilary muscle (which controls the action of the Lens) and the Lens is forced into an unnatural shape. In the effort to obtain a clear brain image, the brain imagines, if you can, the excessive amount of nerve energy used up by such eyes for say sixteen hours each year for the rest of life. In any wonder such people eventually break down under the strain.

Some symptoms of Astigmatism are headaches, nervousness, irritability, loss of "per", tilting of the head to see better, nausea, indigestion, chronic constipation and even, in extreme cases, different individuals are differently affected. The symptoms occurring in an individual depend upon the age, temperament, physique and occupation. Strains as it may seem the discomfort experienced as a result of Astigmatism is not at all in proportion to the amount of error. In fact it usually bears the reverse ratio as we find the better the vision the greater the eyestrain when a small amount of error exists.

It is estimated that normal eyes use about thirty-five per cent. of the nerve energy of a normal body. How much is used by eyes that are abnormal? Could a body remain healthy under such circumstances? You answer.

We have no more reason to expect the eyes to be perfect than the rest of the body. Neither are they so and few eyes are without some degree of Astigmatism. A small amount can be tolerated by many without discomfort especially in outdoor occupations, but the present age of excessive close work, study, reading for pleasure, strong electric light, motion pictures and "glare" from almost everywhere we look at, all tend to manifest the defects in the human eye. It is doubtful if our forefathers' eyes were any better or stronger than those of our generation, but they lived differently and retired earlier, had more of outdoor life, more trees and roads, auto radiators, store windows, etc. What artificial light they used was cool oil gas, not electricity which is charged with rays harmful to the eyes.

Am I advocating a return to the old condition of things? By no means. An eye which is afflicted with "eye-consciousness" and many ailments remote from, yet due to the defects in the human eye, are we paying for advancing civilization. It has taken quite a time for me to tell you the worst. Now comes much better news. Science has again come to our aid in the form of instruments, which in the hands of a skillful optometrist, measures the exact kind and amount of Astigmatism and other eye defects—also machinery for grinding special lenses which when worn entirely neutralizes the effects of the abnormal conditions with resultant normal vision. The amount of nerve energy used for the eyes is saved, the brain is relieved of its proper share. The unpleasant eye and bodily symptoms disappear, work is more efficient and life is enjoyed instead of tolerated. (To Be Continued)

Strange Accidents At Sea

Ship's Officers Give Accounts Of Two Unusual Collisions

Recalling strange accidents at sea, officers of the steamer Beorchamp, at Salt Lake, gave first-hand accounts of two unusual collisions.

Chief Engineer David Thomson was with the Vancouverian when that ship carried troops across the English Channel in war days. Traveling without lights, troop-carriers were ordered clear by the admiralty. A steamer trawler returning from the banks had not heard the warning siren which crossed the trawler's ship's track.

"It was the first time an iron ship was hit in two," said Thomson. "The straggler was a trawler, broadside plowed right through the hull and out the other side. From the port I got a fleeting glance of the stern half sinking."

Only five of the crew of 39 were rescued, and one died soon after. "The confused survivors wouldn't be live it. They couldn't understand why we had not foundered also."

Capt. Will Mason told how the steamer Montpark, a famous Quaker during the war, met a strange end while under his command in 1919. A craft occurred while the Montpark was feeling her way through poor visibility one night a few days out from the Tyne mouth. Capt. Mason saw the bow of another ship approaching into his own, heard terse orders in a foreign language, and watched the unknown vessel back away into the mist.

The Montpark sinking, its crew jumped into the sea. Capt. Mason and a few seamen were rescued from a lifeboat the following evening, but other members of the crew were never found and the ship which left them helpless was never identified.

Progress For Persia

Mechanization Of Old Handicraft Industries Looks Like Milestone

And now the shah of Persia has evolved a five-year plan! Progress is to make its debut through the mechanization of the ancient handicraft industries that have created so many delights for collectors. Great carpet and rug factories will rear their domes where patrician hands have labored after the traditions and the patterns of the centuries.

Progress will be the features that made oriental-rug collecting a delight to those with incomes permitting it. No longer will variations in color, texture, and design, some native dye mixture, or irregularities in pattern betray the advent of a new native weaver. The innovations will have with ancient dye and chemical wastes will reach their climax in a uniformity that matches the best American "orientals."

Indeed, progress in Persia may mean no progress at all. Who will venture a genuine oriental rug if it differs not a whit from the mechanized product of the occident?

British Flight Squadron

Suggestion Is Made That A Visit To Canada Should Be Undertaken

A suggestion was made in the British House of Commons that the British king send to Canada detachments or flights of airplanes to "show the flag" in the Dominion. The planes would be sent aboard a naval escort carrier.

Discussion of the proposal arose during the debate on the air estimates when Oliver E. S. Simmonds, Dunsford Conservative and aircraft manufacturer, told the house. Canada had never sent a squadron of British planes, although every year squadrons of machines from the United States made exhibition flights to Canadian air pageants.

Mr. Simmonds said he was in Ottawa early this year and heard how expressed that the Royal Air Force would "show the flag" in Canada. He asked that the air ministry consider the matter.

Sir Philip Sassoon, minister for air, described the suggestion as "very interesting."

Passenger Train Pooling

Expected To Effect Big Saving Under Arrangement

The passenger train pooling arranged for in the Montreal-Toronto, Ottawa-Toronto and Montreal-Quebec services, as extended and effective from March 11, will produce a total of approximately 1,000,000 train miles per annum, divided about evenly between the C.N.R. and C.P.R. and on the basis of a conservative estimate will represent a saving to each company of approximately $500,000 per annum. This information was given in the House of Commons by Mr. R. J. Manion, minister of railways and canals, based on a telegram from chairman C. P. Fullerton, of the C.N.R. board of trustees.

New Television Machine

Will Be Ready For Demonstration At Chicago Show

The world's largest television machine, being built at the Horton Steel Works, Port Erie, N.Y., will be ready for demonstration at the re-opening of the Century of Progress Exhibition at Chicago on May 1. The builder of the machine is A. S. Sanborn, of Chicago, and the machine will have a 30-foot screen and its transmitter would weigh more than 5,000 pounds. It would be a definition sufficiently large to handle an entire scene at one time.

SYNOPSIS

Camilla Hoyt and Peter Anson, young and in love, marry secretly, deciding to live their own lives apart until Peter is able to provide for her. Peter is a young, struggling sculptor trying to win a competition for a scholarship abroad and Camilla, the adopted daughter of a wealthy family, is not to inherit money when she comes of age and so is studying an ornamental art in the hope of landing an agency job. Others in the story are Avis Worth, another wealthy girl who is going to win Peter, Sylvia Todd, Peter's model, and the Matson family, Camilla's mate with whom he has quarrelled. At a party at an exclusive club Peter entertains Camilla with imitations. When the rest of the members of the party go to a cabaret to continue the party, Peter and Camilla slip off to a beach by themselves and fall asleep on the sand. When they awake it is early morning and Avis and another boy are standing near them. This makes it necessary for Camilla to pounce before the party that she and Peter are married. Bowman and Weeks, an advertising agency, where Camilla has submitted some of her work, send for her and tell her they have a new account which requires unusual treatment of juvenile art. To Camilla's surprise she learns that the account is that of her foster father's company, which has decided on an extensive campaign to bolster up lagging business. The critics were enthusiastic about her work, and Mr. Weeks offers her a salary of $50.00 a week to start and a prospect of having it doubled. She goes to keep a dinner engagement with Peter. She tells Peter of her good fortune in securing employment. Mrs. Hoyt is also informed that Camilla has obtained work and is going to leave the Hoyt household. Mrs. Hoyt rents a studio on the same floor as Peter, and invites him to have lunch there. He accepts reluctantly, but is favorably impressed with his visit.

(Now Go On With The Story)

CHAPTER XXXV.

In the meantime, Camilla was absorbed with her new work. She lived with, by and for it. She accepted and planned the art all day, was on the alert for new ideas and characteristics in her public commission. She visioned the results in their amusing exploits while she followed Rose's patient instructions regarding her share of the household.

Too Much "Party" Last Night

Too Much Food, Late Hours, Smoky Atmosphere

YET—This Morning No "Acid Headache"—No Upset Stomach Scientists say this is the QUICK-EST, SUREST and EASIEST way to COMBAT FLATULENCE, BLOATING, EFFECTS OF over-indulgence—the most powerful and instant relief known to science. Just do this:

TAKE—2 tablespoons of Pinkettes Milk of Magnesia, to be taken before bed. In the morning take 2 more tablespoons of the juice of a WHOLE ORANGE. That's all! You'll feel great.

Or take the equivalent amount of Phillips' Milk of Magnesia tablets. One tablet is equal to 100 grains of the liquid.

Now in tablet form. 25c and 50c sizes. Name on container.

tasks, went to sleep with them in her thoughts.

Of course, she thought about Peter, too; the thoughts squeezed in deliciously with the crowding, peep-toy ones that dominated most of her attention, much as Peter's thought of Camilla treasured into his working hours.

She saw him occasionally, too, but not as often as formerly. It would not always be like that, they told themselves and each other, with sighs and wistful hearts. Just now, the paramount issue for each of them was to make a temporary success which would develop a greater future.

Camilla believed that if she made good in the first months of the Wheathart Cereal campaign, the future would smooth itself out into days less arduous and anxious, when she might devote much more of herself and her time to Peter. The first terms of their marriage plan had been that nothing should interfere with their individual ambitions.

While Camilla thought that she was contributing more inspiration to Peter's work by leaving him alone, she did not believe that because he could not take care of her, he had no right to expect her to share his meager, anxious present and they both knew, as well as they believed, that were she would have realized that nothing could have contributed so richly to his progress as her presence along the way to regret.

The first cloud of discord between them appeared on the horizon when Camilla was working at the office for a month and was gaining confidence in herself rapidly. She had arrived at the studio one Sunday afternoon to find that Peter had expected her, and found him working on a large color advertisement for a transportation company. He refused to leave his work, and she was to find that he was doing the work, but to her surprise that he had said nothing to her about it and seemed unconcerned even then to tell her about it.

He had kissed her rather perfunctorily in greeting and hastened to dispose of his work. Usually, he proceeded with whatever he was doing when she interrupted him.

"Did I disturb you by coming in here?" she was contrite. "I'm sorry. It was such a glorious afternoon and there wasn't another thing to do at the apartment—oh, I am getting to be very efficient housekeeper—and I just couldn't wait longer to see you," she confessed finally.

"That's all right," Peter laughed, clapping her to his suddenly and looking down at her deep eyes. "Of course, your presence is what I need to disturb my work. It does me, though. You are more lovely every time I see you, and that isn't often enough, precious. I was only trying to keep busy so the time would pass more quickly until you came. How's everything?"

"Wonderful, Peter. I'm sure my time is going over big—I just have a hunch it is, because I'm so happy over it. I guess, I am happier every day." Her face glowed with a reflection of her felicity.

WIFE'S DELIGHT AT HUSBAND'S LOSS

30 Pounds of Fat!

Here is something all wives of fat men will be glad to know. It is the experience of a woman whose husband recently weighed 230 lbs. She writes:

"I really feel I must write and tell you that, after taking Kruschen Bitter for nearly 3 months and losing 30 lbs. to 200 lbs. This has been achieved by nothing else but Kruschen. I am now heavy also, and I started taking Kruschen only three weeks ago. Already I have got down from 135 lbs. to 144 lbs. We are delighted." (MRS. C.)

Kruschen combats the cause of fat by sanitizing the internal organs to perform their functions properly—to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

Kindergarten staff compared with your advertising copy. I wasn't going to allow it to you. I thought it for the cash, so I can hold out with my work for the rest of my month."

"Why, of course—why should you do it, if you can spare the time? It looks fine—for what it is."

"For what it is," he agreed tonelessly.

"Why, Peter, what's the matter with you?"

"Oh," impatiently. "It tears me to have to have to grub like that for a little money. It isn't that I mind the extra work. To rather dig sewers, for that matter. Only I have to save my dignity—if any—by staying in the art line—if by any contention of the imagination anyone could call that work."

"She knew that his bitter impatience was a culmination of overwork and anxiety. But the effort which she made to soothe his resentment was like touching a match to a fuse."

"Oh, Peter, it's a rotten shame that you have to humiliate your own pride and sacrifice your precious time for the sake of a few paltry dollars, while some people have so much wealth they can't even think up ways to use a fraction of it."

"No use to talk about that. The world's been like that ever since it was started long enough for some to get used to it. The fact that the rear are either poor runners or victims of circumstances one way or another. They're carrying too much lead or get a bad break. Some will catch up in time, some of the leaders get behind; but they can't all come in first, or even second or third."

"I know, but even a thoroughness need a fair chance. Too much of the time, the race is fixed."

"Sometimes I feel that way, too, but I'm going to keep up and find out I reach the tape and find out."

"You can't win—and you can't be the one to break it." She smiled encouragement and stroked his cheek fondly. He had dropped into a chair and pulled her under beside him.

him as they often sat while they talked.

"But there is so much lack of balance and futile waste of real talent," she continued. "I was just thinking of the time Mother Hoyt was at her wife's and to know what to give dad for his birthday. Not that she particularly desired to give him anything, but it was one of her pet customs to remember anniversaries with impressive and appropriate gifts. He had everything and more than he needed."

"I really feel I must write and tell you that, after taking Kruschen Bitter for nearly 3 months and losing 30 lbs. to 200 lbs. This has been achieved by nothing else but Kruschen. I am now heavy also, and I started taking Kruschen only three weeks ago. Already I have got down from 135 lbs. to 144 lbs. We are delighted." (MRS. C.)

Kruschen combats the cause of fat by sanitizing the internal organs to perform their functions properly—to throw off each day those waste products and poisons which, if allowed to accumulate, will be converted by the body's chemistry into fatty tissue.

"Why, of course—why should you do it, if you can spare the time? It looks fine—for what it is."

"For what it is," he agreed tonelessly.

"Why, Peter, what's the matter with you?"

"Oh," impatiently. "It tears me to have to have to grub like that for a little money. It isn't that I mind the extra work. To rather dig sewers, for that matter. Only I have to save my dignity—if any—by staying in the art line—if by any contention of the imagination anyone could call that work."

Literary Club

A meeting of the Literary Society was held in the church March 28. The programme was opened by singing O Canada. The high school orchestra presented two numbers, Ada Williamson and Donald Campbell singing the chorus in 'Kentucky Moon.' The main feature of the programme was a debate, 'Resolved that Canada should establish commercial reciprocity with United States.' Mae Fisher and Roberta Smith upheld the affirmative representing grade nine, and Katherine Gottenberg and Marjorie McCullough upheld the negative representing grade ten. The judges gave the decision in favor of the affirmative at the same time complimenting both sides.

'The Light of the Lit' was read by Bernard Jordan, bringing many laughs from the crowd.

The play 'Persecuted Maiden' was a big item on the program. The cast, Dick Latiff as villain, Helen Higgins as the daughter Isabel, Dorothy Ditto as the author, George Hargraves the hero, Lena Stephenson the woman of mystery and Ralph Miller as the detective was well chosen and gave an excellent performance.

The meeting was closed by the singing of 'God Save The King.'
